Amado is humorous in a ribald sort of way but what is most important about him, is that he is completely non judgemental. This suggests that some L2 Portuguese may have been an L2 dimension of a creole or, in the least, had significant exposure to creole features. While the link to Larantuka constitutes an important part of the earlier background to contact Portuguese in Dili, the Macau connection amply referred to in our sources is also significant, as the sandalwood trade mostly exported to Macau A duas flores (Portuguese Edition), after the Dutch conquests of Malacca and MakassarMacau became the nearest official Portuguese administrative centre.
