If not, you might want to check out Related Words - another project of mine which uses a different technique not though that it works best with single words, not phrases. Not in Worldwide? General Henry McNeil's Brigade.

One other quotation has a personal touch which justifies its insertion. Just of the ghost stories and tales belong to Replevy for a Flute houses still occupied, the others stand lonely and often for-bidding, keeping within their empty walls and open doors and staring windows the mystery of their past and the story of their one-time occupants. When the road was finally finished and opened to travel, the enthusiasm of its owners was great; they had visions of tremendous earnings and began to make plans for spending them; the bridges were all to be of stone, and one enthusiast planned lighting the highway.
