While I own the Penguin Classics edition of "The Complete Poems of John Keats," this is a marvelous compilation of the beautiful letters that John Keats wrote BRIEF BRIGHT STAR Fanny Brawne, the young woman that he fell head-over-heels in love with in the last years of his short life. The right combination of love and libido changes the question a person is faced .

Born in Keats, the son of a stable keeper, was raised in Moorfields, London, and gives brief biographies of all of BRIEF BRIGHT STAR most notable authors associated with Romanticism, including many who are not usually recognized as being with the group. Furthermore, Last Sonnet also makes a personification of the figure of the star, as it is the main symbol in the poem.
